Free Meal Program Extended for Students at 203 Hawai'i Dept. of Education Schools

Hawai'i DOE's free Grab-and-Go meal program is being extended for students at 203 schools from today through Dec. 18, 2020. The announcement comes after the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture announced it would extend funding for its Summer Food Service Program. Hawai'i's First Lady Dawn Ige said, "Parents left unemployed or underemployed due to COVID-19 may be faced with significant shortfalls to the family budget. Getting free breakfast and lunch for their children at school can make a big difference. We intend to make full use of these federal funds to provide healthy meal options for local families through the Grab-and-Go meal program."

The Grab-and-Go program offers any student, age 18 or younger, nutritious meals for breakfast and lunch. All parents or guardians need to do is pick up the meals curbside to take home. Through the spring and summer, the State prepared close to 1.3 million meals for students, and it expects to see the same level of participation through the fall as most students are learning from home this semester. Free breakfast and lunch meals can be picked up during lunchtime from any of the 203 participating Hawai'i DOE schools. Please contact your school for specific times. A list of those schools and verification documents needed can be found online at www.ainapono.org/grabandgo. To view more:

The House Select Committee on COVID-19 Economic and Financial Preparedness held an informational briefing today to discuss the governor's emergency proclamation regarding pre-travel testing, which launches on Thursday, Oct. 15, as well as a new University of Hawai'i Economic Research Organization (UHERO) Survey that details the impacts COVID-19 has had on Hawai'i's rental properties. According to the survey, Hawai'i's GDP fell by 40-percent, and researchers don't expect that number to lift until travel resumes.
