Safe Travels Hawai'i COVID-19 Evaluation Testing Program Update

Since last week's update on Nov. 3, results of the Safe Travels Testing Evaluation Program show a very small number of travelers continue to test positive for COVID-19 post-arrival to Hawai'i. As of Nov. 9, there have been 18 confirmed positives out of 15,158 tests conducted for a positivity rate of .139% (total, since the program's launch on Oct. 19).

Considerable efforts during the past week have been directed to improve and maximize the overall project efficiency. This includes (but not limited to) increased capacity for incoming travelers to get a post-arrival nucleic acid amplification test (NAAT) and maximized project data flow between collaborating partners. Additionally, the team is working with the Hawai'i Department of Education to invite its employees to participate in the secondary testing following travel. Special communications to employees will be sent by DOE.

To participate in the study, individuals must have also participated in the Safe Travels Hawai'i pre-travel testing program, which requires travelers to receive a negative NAAT from a trusted testing partner 72 hours prior to departure to Hawai'i in order to avoid the State of Hawai'i's mandatory 14-day quarantine. The Safe Travels Testing Evaluation Program, or strategic surveillance study, collects and evaluates data from COVID-19 testing of travelers post-arrival to Hawai'i. The program is designed to estimate the frequency of COVID-19 among pre-tested returning residents and visitors and determine the effectiveness of the Safe Travels Hawai'i program.

Dr. DeWolfe Miller, epidemiologist from the University of Hawai'i's John A. Burns School of Medicine, is leading the study in coordination with Hawai'i Emergency Management Agency (HI-EMA), Governor's Office, Lt. Gov. Josh Green and testing partners.
